SUMMARY:

Dixie Queen is a grand and versatile replica paddle steamer, whose proportions set the atmosphere of a ship rather than a large boat. The lower deck features a reception area and seated dining lounge, whilst the upper deck includes a large event space and stage area. A magnificent wooden staircase separates the two decks, with a lift providing wheelchair access. Due to her size, Tower Bridge must raise to let Dixie Queen pass – something which makes for a spectacular shot on camera. She is however unable to travel further eastwards past London Bridge. Her unique style makes Dixie Queen a fantastic venue for filming and promotional activities on the River Thames. She has starred in countless productions and events, as well as being deployed as a green room and staging area for a large number of filming jobs on the River Thames.
